

Who's the Boss?

Most students think of teachers as The Boss in class, the person who is in supreme command, the omnipotent dictator of classroom policy.

In a way, though, teachers and students are equals, thrown together to achieve a common goal: education. No, this doesn't mean that students can give their teachers homework or detention.

It simply means that maybe teachers are more than just The Boss during school hours. They are there to help students succeed.

So in most respects, students are in charge of their futures. Teachers just give them the knowledge needed to go on to bigger and better things.

Say "Cheese!" Cheese?? Yes, thanks. We'll try some cheese as soon as we're done with this chicken, say Ms. Schoenhofen, Shavon Sandifer and Selena Davis.

Mrs. Pope, Mr. Gotthelf and Mrs. Christ show everyone that teachers are more than just co-workers. They're friends.

Mr. Todd shows off his math skills as Mr. Kennedy reads a composition paper. Is something wrong with this picture???
