

Littlepage Horns in on Blaeserkorps

Oldtime hunting companion and longtime hunting horn enthusiast Ken Littlepage writes that he was one of the two Americans parti-cipating in the Germany-wide contest that drew 650 of the best hunting buglers in the land.

And his group won first prize, he writes: "Since I last saw you I spent two years in France. Now I'm stationed in Zweibruecken with the USACOMZEUR. As you know, when I was stationed here be-fore, I belonged to the Sachsenhausen Blaeserkorps. Then after I first-half man of the hour when joined the Saarbrucken group we were invited to perform at the Jagdschloss Kranichstein.

Jagdhorn. We had the best score of the day with 868 points out of a possible 975. Second best score was 865.

In the old days, Ken Littlepage was a member of the Rhein-Main Rod and Gun Club, and he carried that hern on every boar hunt and pheasant drive.

He collected a lot of good trophies, too, like fallow deer and red deer stag and a mouflon, as I remember. So, hats off! to a man whose newest accomplishment deserves recognition.

On the next play, with 15 seconds left in the half, fullback Bill Graham builed his way over from the three for the touchdown. Mike Pozurgal's pass to Tony Lewis for the bonus points failed.

The Warriors came on strong in the second half but had a sustained drive halted when Pozurgal, a defensive safety, intercepted a pass at his own goal line.

Shortly after, the Warriors got another chance when they took possession at the Stallion 33 following a short punt. Two bad snaps from center, however, shoved Wiesbaden back into its own end of the field, and Harold MacMillan pounced on the loose ball after the second bad snap at the Warrior 20.

Four plays later, Dougherty tossed an 18-yard TD strike to the extra points for a 14-0 lead.

Doug Thompson returned the ensuing kickoff 83 yards for a touchdown that gave the Warriors new life, but the run for extra points failed.

Warrior defensive standout Doug Clark, who was credited with 14 tackles, scored the last two points of the game with a safety when he tackled Dougherty in the stallion end zone.

Com Z Forfett Overruled; Tilt Will Be Played

MUNICH (Special)—Col. Robert G. Rettle, director of the US-ARRUR sports program, announced Sunday he was overruling the forfeit decision of Com Z Commissioner Bueford Moss in the controversial unplayed game between the Rheinland-Pfalz Defenders and the Stuttgart Stallions. The game, originally scheduled for Oct. 6 in Stuttgart, will now be played on a neutral field and at a time acceptable to both teams.

Col. Rettle said the game was not played as scheduled because of the difficulty of the Stuttgart team to provide a suitable field. League officials determined prior to the game slated for Oct. 6 that the Stallions' field was unfit for play and the game was moved to another field where it was to follow an AYA game. Unfortunately, the latter game did not end in time for the Com Z Conference game to be started with sufficient daylight re-

In ruling that the disputed game will now be played, Rettie said he was "motivated by the best interests of good sportsman-ship and fair play." He added, "these two fine teams should not be deprived of their right to go at each other because of an ad-ministrative problem."

The sports chief also said, "While there was considerable merit to the ruling of Commissioner Moss, there were simply too many extensions circumstances for the forfest to stand." Rettle cited the shortage of acceptable sports fields in an everseas theater as one of the complicating factors. He added, "I hope all concerned will accept the determination with the spirit of fair play which motivated my decision."
